COUNCIL CHRONOLOGY

The Drywall Finishing Council (DWFC) was founded in 1992 by a small group of manufacturers of drywall finishing materials. Founding members were united by concerns over a lack of industry standards related to both specification and application procedures and a shared commitment to address these issues.

After meeting annually for four years, the DWFC determined that many of the projects and issues they faced required more attention and moved to a twice-yearly format in 1996. A spring meeting is held at the annual AWCI convention, followed by a fall meeting, usually held in September.

Today, the DWFC proudly represents roughly three dozen members, associate members, and honorary members.

Council members represent the interests of the entire industry, not just their own organizations. Meetings are conducted in accordance with Parliamentary rules and guidelines, such as the requirement that a quorum be present in order to vote on and accept minutes from previous meetings.

DWFC meetings typically begin with a reading of the previous meeting's minutes and a vote to accept or reject, followed by a treasurer's report and discussion of agenda items and new business.
